

Meet your Board of Directors of the Economic Alliance

Varied business experiences allow the Board to guide the Alliance through business development challenges

BY THE ECONOMIC ALLIANCE OF LEWIS COUNTY

A group such as the Economic Alliance of Lewis County is only as strong as its Board of Directors.

They provide strategic focus, engagement, passion, clear goals and commitment. Your Alliance Board offers all that, plus an abundance of experience in a wide variety of economic areas. They are leaders of the community heavily invested in the prosperity and health of Lewis County.

They set the direction of the Alliance and offer their sage advice to the management team at the Alliance.

"I'm really fortunate to have this board," said Alliance Executive Director Richard DeBolt. "With their varied business experiences, they provide me with wisdom and direction that allows the Alliance to keep on track with our vision to increase the number of jobs in Lewis County which leads to a higher quality of life. They keep me focused on helping existing businesses thrive and also to attract new businesses."

DeBolt said most important, however, is they bring a heartfelt caring to this community.

"Yes, they are leaders of Lewis County, but they bring such a passion and dedication to the Alliance that can't be replicated," DeBolt said. "I'm lucky to have such a great group of outstanding people."

DIRECTOR'S CORNER

The Alliance is fortunate to have such a wise, caring Board of Directors

BY RICHARD DEBOLT

Executive Director - Economic Alliance of Lewis County

I am so proud to show off the Board of Directors of the Economic Alliance of Lewis County in this edition of The Economic Report.

They have so much experience coming from all sides of the business world. Chair Luke Moerke is the perfect leader. He is serious, to the point, a true professional who truly keeps me on task. He's also a pleasure to work with.

The board chair only serves for a time, and then the next one steps forward.

I miss the day when he does leave the post. But life does move on. Luke replaced Ben Kostick, for example. Ben led the Alliance when I first was hired as executive director, and he got me and the staff off on solid footing.

Please read through the brief bios of the Board of Directors starting on page one of this report. We really do have a board with vast knowledge of all sectors of the economy, from banking to sales to telecommunications to — well, I could go on, but if you read through the story, you'll be impressed.

They also have deep roots in Lewis County. Jonathan Hubbert, president of Powersports Northwest in Centralia, for example, is a third-generation Economic Alliance of Lewis County board member. He's a prime example of this board. Not only does he bring a keen acumen for business, like other board members, he also is involved in groups such as the Centralia College Foundation and the Boys and Girls Club of Lewis County.

The board brings more than their particular area of expertise, so many of them, such as Hubbert, also represent the preeminent foundations and boards and agencies from across Lewis County.

Some might believe being executive director of the Alliance is a walk in the park, but it is anything but that. Sometimes, I need the advice, the guidance, when a tricky development comes before me. Balancing government and economic development interests (and the public at large) can ruffle feathers. Sometimes I just need a sounding board.

These 26 board members give it to me straight, but are also so supportive of what we are trying to do here at the Alliance.

To the board, I salute you and thank you for all your efforts in this volunteer endeavor.

Joining the Pacific Mountain Workforce Development Council

I also get to serve on various boards. I'm pleased to have joined the board at Pacific Mountain Workforce Development Council (PacMtn).

This nonprofit group is a key player in bringing regional workforce development to the counties it covers. I will be able to help influence the direction of PacMtn as it, like the Alliance, has a mission to help foster economic growth.

Kaech awarded $1,500 Gary Stamper scholarship

Award honors former Lewis County Commissioner and Mossyrock coach and educator

BY THE ECONOMIC ALLIANCE OF LEWIS COUNTY

The Gary Stamper Scholarship Committee, under the direction of the Economic Alliance of Lewis County, has chosen Koltin Kaech as its 2024 $1,500 scholarship recipient.

Koltin is a senior at Mossyrock High School and was chosen for this award for his community involvement, excellent academics and plans for a future career in education. After graduation Koltin plans to go to Centralia College to become an elementary teacher.

His favorite high school memory is making it to state in football with his cousins and uncle. He played offensive and defensive line for the Mossyrock High School football team.

The scholarship is given in honor of the late Lewis County Commissioner Gary Stamper, who died from Covid-19 complications in 2021.

"Gary Stamper would be proud of the selection of Koltin for the scholarship in his name," said Economic Alliance of Lewis County Executive Director Richard DeBolt. "Stamper was heavily involved in sports at Mossyrock where he was a teacher."

The public is encouraged to donate to the scholarship fund so Stamper's legacy can be carried out year after year.

Lewis County Commissioner Gary Stamper smiles while walking in a parade in Centralia.

About the scholarship

The Economic Alliance of Lewis County created the Gary Stamper Memorial Scholarship after the passing of Commissioner Stamper in September of 2021 at the age of 67.

Gary was known for being a great leader, career educator, great mentor, soft-spoken, big-hearted, family man who had a passion for service. His death sent shockwaves through the community.

He was dedicated to his community and served as principal for White Pass

OPPORTUNITIES

Many people recognize the value of apprenticeship, and the value the skilled trades bring to people seeking family wage jobs. Not everyone is suited for or wants to attend college and the trades can be an ideal avenue for those who like to build things and work with their hands. IBEW 76 and our training program, the Southwest Washington Electrical J.A.T.C. (swwaejatc.org), have strong ties to Lewis County. Our members who live and work in Lewis County not only provide a strong standard of living for their families, but they also provide top notch electrical services and are very invested in their communities.

Whether volunteering at their church, coaching Little League, Fastpitch and Wrestling programs or helping to build something in the community, there's a good chance IBEW 76 members can be found. Sometimes it's a larger project like the construction and electrification of Recreation Park in Chehalis, other times it's more individualized like fixing something in a concession stand or repairing some lights. Volunteering and donating to the Visiting Nurses Foundation and the Lewis County Forgotten Childrens Fund are other areas where IBEW 76 members can be found.

It's this same type of commitment to the contractors they work for that makes our Lewis County members some of the best electricians around. We're proud to see the Local School Districts recognizing the value apprenticeship brings to our youth and promoting it as an option alongside other pathways to success. To learn more about the contractors who work in partnership with IBEW 76, visit the local Chapter of the National Electrical Contractors website at www.necasww.org.

Economic development is another area that IBEW 76 is heavily invested in. Working at the Local, State and Federal levels, we are always looking for ways to support the creation of new opportunities for family wage jobs. As important as the work at the State and Federal levels is, it's the local partnerships that can bring the best results. The Economic Alliance of Lewis County is an excellent example of Business and Labor working together for the betterment of our communities. Strong local economies and family wage jobs are what we all want and need to help our communities and families thrive.

Confederated Tribes of the Chehalis Reservation signs agreement establishing government-to-government relations with the state Department of Commerce

Milestone memorandum of understanding formalizes areas of partnership; seeks to remove administrative barriers and ensures data sovereignty

BY THE ECONOMIC ALLIANCE OF LEWIS COUNTY

Chehalis Tribe Chairman Dustin Klatush and Washington State Department of Commerce Director Mike Fong today signed a historic memorandum of understanding (MOU) establishing government-to-government relations between the Confederated Tribes of the Chehalis Reservation and the department in a ceremony at Talking Cedars in Rochester.

The agreement seeks to remove administrative barriers, improve communications, implement culturally appropriate data privacy and security measures, and more, according to a news release.

“As chairman of the Chehalis Tribe, I am inspired by the words of Sitting Bull, ‘Behold, my friends, the spring is come; the earth has gladly received the embraces of the sun, and we shall soon see the results of their love!’ These words echo the spirit of our tribal sovereignty — a force that fills us with hope and resilience,” said Chairman Klatush. “Our sovereignty isn’t about just laws; it is about who we are as a people. It’s about our right to govern ourselves, protect our lands and celebrate our culture. It is what makes us Chehalis.”

Klatush said entering into an MOU with Commerce will have practical benefits like expedited contracting, and also includes areas of partnership integral to the expression of tribal sovereignty.

“Having the opportunity to voice our preferences around tribal consultation and data sovereignty is a refreshing and greatly appreciated change,” he said. “Let the power of our sovereignty move us forward; may it guide us to a brighter future for our tribal communities and the next seven generations. Together, let’s embrace it, cherish it, and let it lead us to greatness.”

“I am honored to join Chehalis Tribe Chairman Dustin Klatush in forging this groundbreaking relationship,” said Commerce Director Fong. “Strong, vibrant tribal nations and tribal communities strengthen all Washington communities in many ways. This agreement marks a pivotal moment in how Commerce works in accord with tribal communities in our state.”

Fong said the MOU is the first of more similar agreements with tribes in Washington state anticipated in coming weeks.

“These agreements reflect our values as an agency. We take a holistic approach to working with all communities to access the continuum of resources available through Commerce, from capital funding for affordable housing, community facilities and energy infrastructure to support for community services, public safety, and economic development and job creation.”

Fong, who recently marked his first year leading Commerce, has traveled the state extensively, meeting with tribal leaders and community members, listening to understand how Commerce can improve collaboration on top priority issues. In his short tenure, Commerce created a standalone Office of Tribal Relations led by Michelle Gladstone-Wade, established tribal liaisons across the department for critical programs, added funding for technical assistance around applying for funding, and streamlined clean energy grant opportunities.

Fong has made it a priority to pursue a high-touch, holistic approach that seeks to remove unnecessary bureaucracy in Commerce processes and procedures, and provide more technical assistance to tribes and all communities the agency works with throughout the state. This is especially important to smaller tribes, small towns and rural communities, all of which may lack the administrative and financial resources to navigate complex pathways to access funding available to them through Commerce.

Junior/High School, Lewis County Commissioner for District #3 as well as Fire Commissioner for District #3.

A renowned prep basketball coach, he was on the sidelines as the Mossyrock girls basketball team’s head coach during its successful run in the 2000s. The run, and Gary’s coaching career, culminated in a 2B state championship in 2007 when the Vikings defeated La Salle for the school’s first hoops title.

“A former principal, teacher and coach, Stamper touched many lives throughout Lewis County and beyond even before joining the Board of County Commissioners in 2015,” the county wrote in a news release following his passing.

He prided himself on “standing up for the little guy,” protecting the area’s timber interests and promoting economic growth while maintaining the area’s rural feel.

In his personal life, Gary enjoyed traveling with his partner Bobbi Barnes, and spending time with family, especially his grandchildren, whom he called his “top priority.”

A self-admitted softie when it came to animals, Gary also reveled in helping others. Whether it was delivering firewood to a struggling family, buying groceries for a perfect stranger or purchasing shoes for a student in need.

Gary, who grew up first in Riffe and then Mossyrock, graduated from Mossyrock High School before earning a bachelor’s degree in Political Science from Central Washington University and a master’s degree in School Administration from Heritage University.
